I was extremely honored to be contacted by Senator Sherrod Brown regarding the work we are doing at Princeton on equity.

“This effort is long overdue for a multitude of reasons. We would never think about giving certain kids textbooks and not others. Any student that is in a classroom is going to get a textbook, yet when it comes to the most powerful educational engine right now -- broadband internet -- it’s limited to only students who can afford it. This creates an unacceptable opportunity gap and further extends the achievement gap for far too many students.”
